Mayor Mitchel, on returning yesterday from a ten days' hunting trip in Canada, said he had no recollection of a conference in his office last May when it was suggested that the preparedness parade be called off beparedness parade be called off because it might offend the German-Americans, as recently stated by Colonel Charles H. Sherrill.

"I have no recollection of such a conference," said the Mayor. "Alderman Curran confirms Mr. Sherrill in saying there was a talk at my office. I can say, without any doubt, that nobody in Washington and nobody in behalf of Washington made any suggestion to me that the parade be called off. If the question of calling off the parade was raised at my office it must have been by one of us locally. I never had any idea at any time of having it called off, and I never would have listened to any such suggestion. The question must have been raised, if at all, because of public feeling. We were at a crisis just then. If such a suggestion were made to me I would have poohpoohed it."

The Mayor said he brought back a moose as a result of his trip. Asked if it was a Bull Moose, the Mayor remarked:
"Sure. That's the only kind you are allowed to shoot."

WILL AIDS INSTITUTIONS Harris Wolff Leaves Several Public Annuities

Annuities

Annuities for several institutions are established in the will of Harris Wolff, real estate operator, which was filed for probate yesterday. The testator died October 7 at Battle Creek, Mich., his New York home being at 21 East Eighty-second Street.

Mr. Wolff directed the following annuities be paid from the residuary trust during its continuance: Beth Israel Hospital, $500; Hebrew Orphan Asylum, $200; Educational Alliance, $100, and the Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, $100. The executors also are directed to pay to Beth Israel, the balance due of a $10,000 gift for which Mr. Wolff subscribed.

T. R. HITS WILSON FOR 8-HOUR LAW

-Own Words Condemn Him.

Wilkes-Barre, Penn., Oct. 14 .- Theo-or else was no respecter of glorious pasts.

"This man, your honor," he said, "registered from 170 New York Avenue. We looked him up, and there's no house there, except the beginnings of one. The foreman of the construction gang never heard of him."

Frumkin received a summons instead, and Mr. Coler will have a chance to explain that he has not become a professional floater. He did formerly live at 170 New York Avenue, Brooklyn, but the old family residence there was torn down some time ago to make way for an apartment building.

Although he recently announced he was going to move from the city to escape its high tax rate, it is now understood that Mr. Coler is to occupy quarters in the new building, which is to be his own.

Wilkes-Barre, Penn., Oct. 14.—Theodore Roosevelt, speaking here tonight, urged the election of Charles E. Hughes by laying bare what he termed the vices of the eight-hour railroad law and the cowardice of President Wilson in dealing with the threatened strike.

Addressing himself to an audience composed largely of mine workers and those in sympathy with them, the Colonel emphasized the difference between his own methods of settling the anthracite coal strike and those of President Wilson in the railroad dispute.

Mr. Roosevelt declared that the "President Wilson further said, while trying to goss over his timidity in the present by assuming an attitude of frowning defiance as regards the nebulous future, that the American people must be made a partner in the settlement of disputes that interrupt the life of the nation, that it must enforce the partnership and see to it that no organization is stronger than that organization to which we all belong, our own government, and that we, the people, must say to any outside organiza-

Danger for Laboring Men

The Colonel declared emphatically that he believed in labor unions and firmly supported them when their demands were right. The eight-hour law, with its wage increase, was not right, he said. It not only was not just to the railroads, but it was also "deeply prejudicial to the real and permanent interests of the laboring man."

"Labor leaders who are abortsighted," Colonel Roosevelt declared, "may at the moment get from a man in public office, who is not actuated by justice, more than from a man who is actuated of the right method of action; and therefore that he American point, by following which he would have enforced the railroads, but it was also "deeply prejudicial to the real and permanent of disputes that the settlement of disputes that the resident wilson further said, while right method.

"President Wilson further said, while right method of action: and therefore that he had adopted the wong method of action—althous further is so, if it is applied universally, then one of the right method of action.

"President Wilson further said, while trying to go so over his titude of frowning defiance as r own government, and that we, the people, must say to any outside organization that it 'must not interrupt the national life without consulting us.'

"These are fine words about the future. They are intended to cover up, but as a matter of fact they furnish the strongest condemnation of Mr. Wilson's deed in the present. In these words Mr. Wilson exactly describes what he ought to have done with the brotherhoods, and explicitly condemns the action which he in fact took. If the principles he laid down were good for the so easy or varied a type that no exfort mixing time arrives that same released in harvest time, a man engaged as a watchman through the angaged in the exhausting work of a steel puddler in a continuous seven-days—aweek, night-and-day industry, should be governed by precisely the same rule, or by the same rule, or by the same rule, or by the same rule or by the same rule."

"I champion Mr. Hughes," said the Colonel in the only reference he made to the candidate, "as against Mr. Wilson exactly the son because in every such crisis Mr.
